PM Coaching In Erste Group

Author: Dominique Ionescu

The PM Coaching Programme started in December last year has finished after three demanding modules, ensuring a new competence in our Group.

PMO colleagues and program managers took part in this programme and learned how to conduct efficient coaching and mentoring conversations in order to support the Erste Group project managers to overcome obstacles and so reach their project objectives better and faster.

Project Management is a very complex process, covering the application of a wide variety of knowledge, skills, tools and techniques to project daily activities in order to reach the project objectives. Even that most of the times managing projects is a straight forward execution of the defined process steps. In many cases the project manager faces real challenges not only due to the fact that projects differ from one to another in terms of complexity, business area, stakeholders, technical solution, etc., but also because project managers work in complex systems environment (influenced by its past and context, characterized by unpredictable outcomes).

In some specific situations managing stakeholders, ensuring proper risks mitigation, enhancing team motivation (especially within Group projects) and conflict resolution, increasing delivery performance including quality assurance - just to mention some challenges - become certain issues for the project manager.

PM Coaching is a combination of PM Mentoring (providing advices and tips from personal experience) and Personal Coaching (enabling the competencies & resources of the coachee). This is why PM Coaching is following a solution-focused and resource/strength-orientation approach, helping the project managers to find ideas and solutions to overcome their issues (it is known that more than half comprise of "get stuck" and "decision making" type of issues).

The PM Coaching service (offered starting June 2014) is addressed primarily to the senior project managers from our Group (only employees - not external resources), in order to better support them throughout the entire project life-cycle solving specific challenges (for which trainings and past experiences provided no solution), enhancing the project implementation success rate.

Here are the Erste Group PM coaches which graduated the PM Coaching Programme:

Please also have a look at the other topics in this newsletter: a good article from Karim Kani about the difference between Change Management and Change Request Management - probably one of the most popular misunderstandings in Project Management. Furthermore, enjoy the helpful tips & tricks regarding usage of MS Project and more other interesting information!

A cél: kisebb menedzsment fókusz a projekteken, nagyobb fókusz a portfólión

Project governance

- Project sponsoring can be delegated to „B-1”.
- First „B” level involvement can be on the Work Stream.
- Changes without effects on approved scope, budget and timing has to be delegated to Program Steering committee.

Program governance

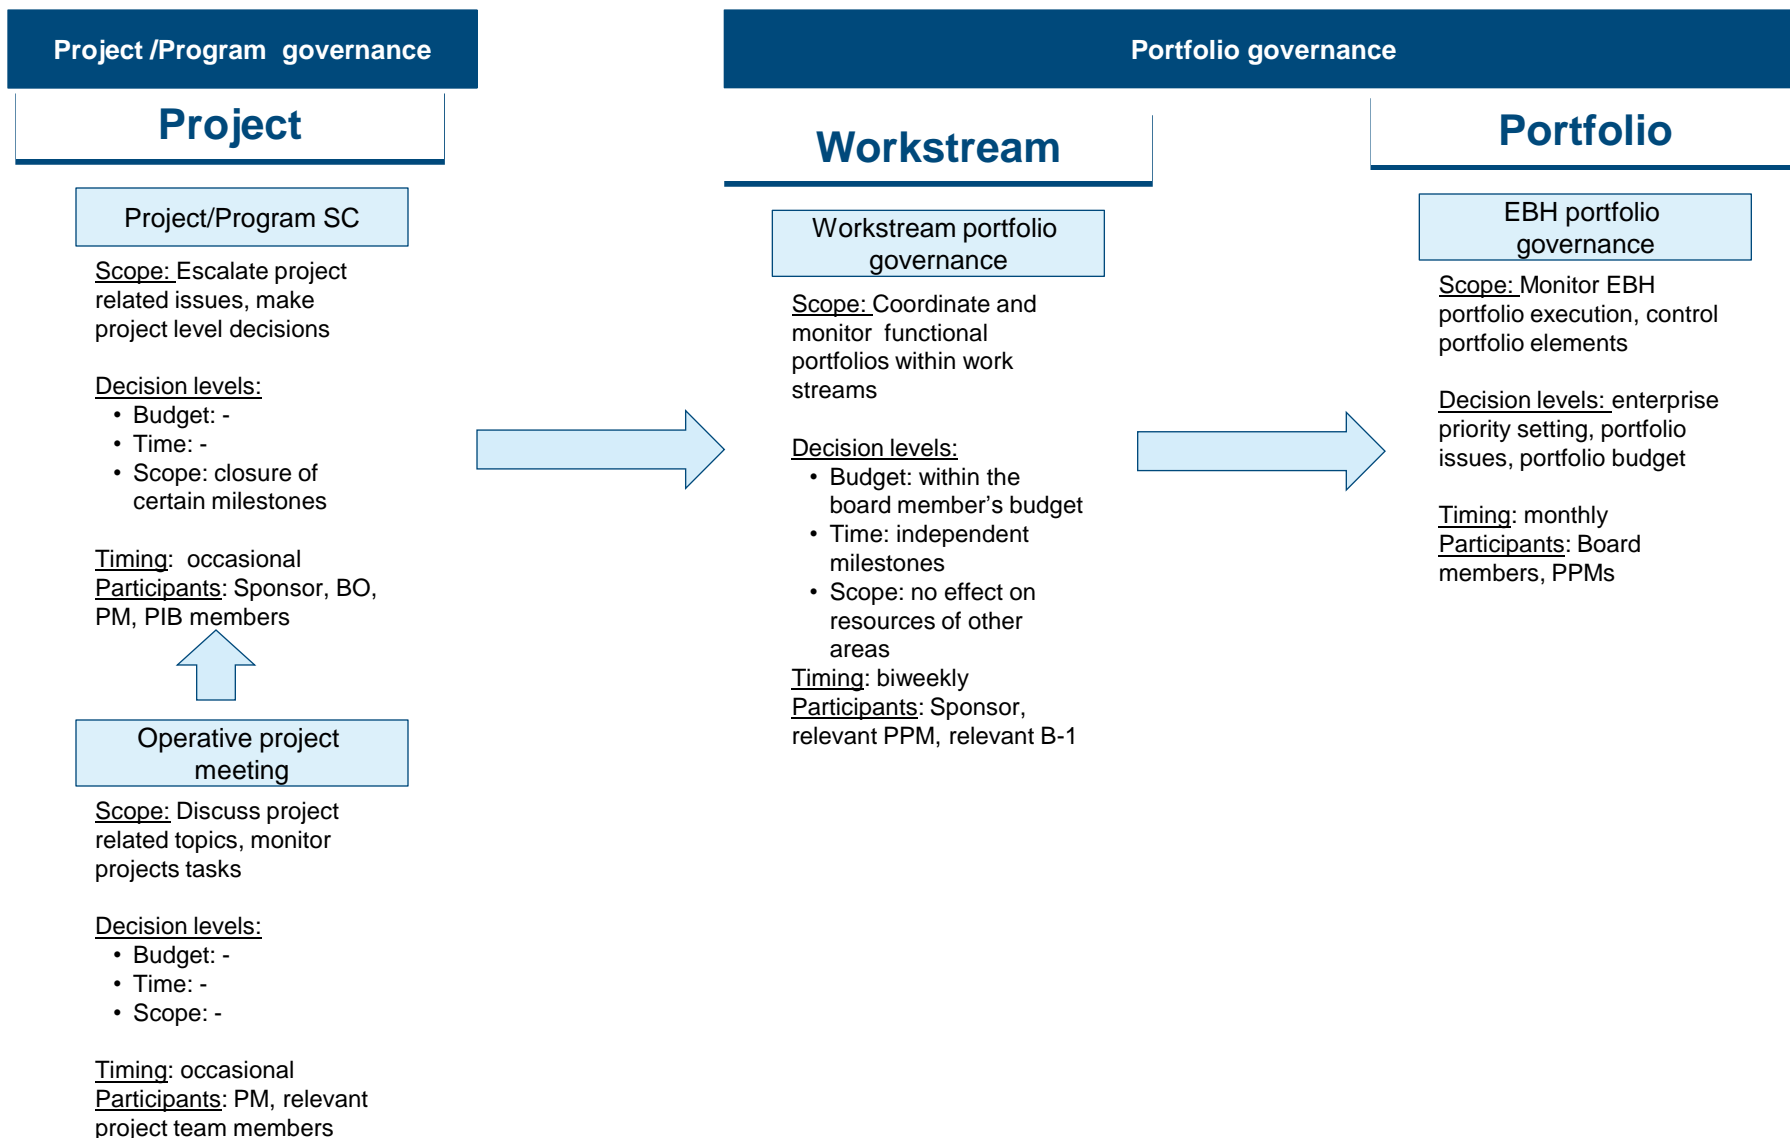

- First priority: overall program level decision making.
 - Overall program budget.
 - Program KPI's and alignment with program scope.
 - Decision on new program elements (scope or project).
- Decision on issues escalated by project governance.
- Approval of changes without effects on approved program scope, budget and timing without Board ratification.

Portfolio governance

- First priority: decision on EBH-s project portfolio.
 - Portfolio elements: programs, standalone projects.
 - EBH level issues: inter directorate resource conflicts, EBH level budget conflicts, scheduling conflicts related to multiple KPI's and BAU tasks.
 - Approval of changes with effects on approved program/project scope, budget and timing with Board ratification.

EBH Board members will get better insight on the overall project portfolio with less effort to be spent. Decision making on EBH level resource conflicts will be solved on Portfolio governance forum.
